"With a congressional program which will have the democratic party churning on the rocks within sixty days, and with the republican party divided and confused in its counsels to a degree it has never heen before, the progressive party has every reason to plunge into the 1916 campaign with vim, vigor and a determination to win.

LONDON, November 13.—Teutonic submarine activity continues in the lediterranean. Announcements of the oss of merchant vessels seldom reveal where the sinking took place, but several steamers reported today as havng gone down apparently met their ate in Mediterranean waters. Of these the British steamer Den of Crombie, of approximately 5,000 tons, was the largest. Loss of life, however, apparently was involved in the sinking of the Italian steamer Firenze, off the Egyptian coast, six passengers and fourteen of the crew being reported missing. So far as was learned no Americans were on board the Firenze.

How Firenze Was Sunk. A Rome correspondent sends the following regarding the sinking of the republican party troubles, and a few spoken words on preparedness that were rather to the point.

The signed statement referred to the recent Ohio republican maneuvering by which ex-Ambassador Herrick and Gov. Willis put aside presidential ambitions to announce that the state was solid for Senator Burton.

The spoken words of the national chairman were in effect that the progressive leaders, while undetermined as to the particular form that preparedness should take, rather favored the Swiss idea of universal service.

Speaking on "Some American Problems," before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco today. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, asked what the United States intended to do to prepare for the influx of immigration expected at the end of the war in Europe. The report that Lord Kitchener, secretary for war, has been sent on a mission to King Constantine, to whom he will offer new proposals, has received no confirmation, but the coincidence of his departure with the king's resolunis departure with the king's resolu-tion to dissolve the chamber makes the supposition plausible. The report also gains interest from the announcement from several sources that an Austro-German mission has already arrived at Athens to formulate a definite under-standing between Greece and the cen-tral nowers standing between directive tral powers.

At the same time the Rumanian king is said to be receiving deputations from both belligerents, but the position of Greece and Rumania, despite diplomatic pressure, is still unmodified.
